What can librarians learn from Google products and services? And how can we convey to our users the benefits of other databases in a library? Join us for a workshop (lunch included) on the status of library databases in the age of Google.

Speakers

A. Ben Wagner, Sciences Librarian, University at Buffalo
“Google & Company: Are we learning the lessons fast enough?”

Gloria Meisel, User Education Librarian, Westchester Community College
“The Internet vs. Subscription Databases: Do we really get what we pay for?”

Followed by The World Cafe: a moderated conversational process on marketing library resources.

Cost: $17.00 per person includes lunch and coffee break
For directions, visit http://www.colonie.org/library/welcome.html

---

Are Databases Dead?

PROGRAM REGISTRATION FORM

To register, complete this form and send it to the address below, along with your check for $17.00 per person, made out to “Capital District Library Council.”

NAME:
LIBRARY:
PHONE/EMAIL:

Registration deadline is November 20, 2007.
Return this form to: Sue Rahn, CDLC, 28 Essex Street, Albany, NY 12206